

I do not believe that it is in the interest of the American people to further broaden and relax restrictions on media ownership. This issue needs to be carefully examined--we rely on the media for vital information--already it has become corporate, generic, and homogenized. Relaxing these restrictions would only serve the corporate powers that be and not the American people.